Some of the twenty questions might not have “exact” answers. Some might have none at all. We don’t want you to ignore these questions. Answer them to the best of your ability. If you’re confident that there is no answer, say so in your paper (but do so in a CREATIVE way).

Please do not simply transcribe your interview (see #3 in the instructions). Papers submitted in this manner or other answers that do not “flow” together will not receive a “4” on the above scale. At best, you’ll earn a “3,” but “2s” or “1s” are far more likely. We want your paper to look like a polished insight into your chosen career; we don’t want it to be a collection of disjointed ideas.

Make sure you have a clear, distinct introduction and conclusion. Don’t simply launch into the questions during your intro or end with the answer to the last one in your conclusion. Be creative!
